

Chula Vista Consultant Biography

Stacey Kurz

Before becoming the senior project coordinator of Chula Vista Stacey Kurz worked in a variety of different fields before settling into her current role. As a high school student in Long Island, New York, Stacey started conducting and facilitating events for her high school. While there, she managed school announcements and informed her classmates on the concerns within the community that she lived in.

Long Island is known for being a storm area in New York. Given the various storms that had taken place previously, there was a lot of trash pile ups that created some environmental problems in her community. A lot of the trash had circulated along the trails and as a result around a trail fairly close to the high school that Stacey attended. In Stacey's senior year, she decided to organize an "earth league" to help clean up the trail that had been filled with trash since she was in kindergarten. She engaged her peers on the situation and organized school assemblies to get the word out to her fellow students.

From her experience facilitating these kinds of events and programs, she realized that she wanted to major in business while in college. While in university, Stacey became responsible for the transportation planning within her class and became involved with housing as well.

When she arrived at Chula Vista, Stacey found that the Healthy Chula Vista organization required and needed all the traits and skills that she had to offer. Everything starting from high school to the present day led to the position that she currently holds. Stacey has contributed a lot of hard work toward the West Chula Vista and strives to continue to help and further develop Chula Vista to benefit the community and its citizens. She helps conduct projects to enact a positive change on any given situation or problem that needs to be tackled. By doing this she helps develop the community in an efficient way that would better serve the community. Stacey is always working to find ways to achieve this and is also a forward thinking person who not only thinks of ways to help now but to also ensure an even better future.

Student Author: Eleena Jose